History of the Institute

It was 1920, and the island city of Bombay had only one medical college, the Grant Medical College. India was under British rule and naturally the college was managed by the British. Through donations from the Tilak Swaraj Funds, on the 4th of September 1921, the National Medical College was established.

Dr. A. L. Nair magnanimously donated two acres of his land for the hospital campus. In 1925, Dr Nair also helped to set up a hospital which he named after his mother Bai Yamunabai Laxman Nair.

Later, Mr. M. N. Desai, popularly known as Topiwala Desai, made a generous contribution of Rs. 5 lacs to the college - which was then named after him as the Topiwala National Medical College.

Since then without looking back the T. N. Medical College and B. Y. L. Nair Ch. Hospital have surged ahead and established themselves as premier institutions of the city. The campus has expanded from the two acres donated by Dr. A. L. Nair to twenty acres in 2020. The institute boasts off many first like Gastroenterology, Rheumatology, Dermatopathology, etc. The dept. of Forensic Medicine also has many first like ISO certified mortuary and Multi Disciplinary Child Protection Center.

Today, with the infrastructure of the 1300 bedded B.Y.L. Nair Charitable Hospital behind it, TNMC makes an ideal temple of learning arena for budding medicos of the 21st century. It provides training courses in more than 25 different medical and allied branches, including 9 superspeciality courses.
